Jesse Tyson, MBA

President and CEO, The National Black MBA Association®

*“One of The 100 Most Powerful Executives in Corporate America”
-Black Enterprise Magazine*

Biographical Overview

For more than 35 years, Jesse Tyson has been a thought leader, business strategist and implementer. Through technological innovation, keen business strategy and aggressive business tactics, his career grew from an early interest in marketing and sales with initial successes in sales strategy and operations; to his regional expertise in energy policy, to leading road transportation, safety and efficiency operations at the world’s largest oil and gas corporation, Exxon Mobil. Tyson’s acumen for not only business operations, but strategy, also put him in the position of leading the Global Aviation business for Exxon Mobil based in Brussels, Belgium, where he worked across multiple industry groups developing strategic customer segmentation solutions, operations and shareholder return requirements. He directed a $10 billion business with clients in over 50 countries and 500 locations that delivered over 40% in returns for Exxon Mobil and delivered $30 million per year in operating efficiencies.

Mr. Tyson is an international business trailblazer, a global marketing and operations expert and a recognized name in the multinational oil and gas industry.

Early Career: Jesse's Rise at Exxon Mobil

Prior to relocating to Brussels Belgium, Jesse Tyson served in many positions within Exxon Mobil, with responsibilities in Europe, Asia, Latin America, Africa and the USA. Mr. Tyson led the South America Fuels Marketing efforts for Exxon Mobil as Marketing Director and President of Exxon Mobil Inter-America. As chief of the Exxon Mobil South America Fuels group, his focus areas included the retail fuels "free" and regulated markets. He represented Exxon Mobil as a spokesperson with the Council of the Americas, the US Department of Commerce, the US Department of State and the US Department of Energy. Earlier in his career, Mr. Tyson served as the Global Customer Service and Logistics Manager with functional responsibility for operations, road transportation and order to cash management. In this position, he pioneered Exxon Mobil's global call center consolidations project, consolidating 40 global call centers into 9 central facilities.

Early Life

Raised up by his grandparents, both of whom were sharecroppers, Jesse Tyson grew up in rural Jackson, Tennessee, to humble beginnings. The Tyson family atmosphere was one of love, hard work and compassion, where he was taught to be moral and ethical "in all his dealings". Jesse had a very close relationship with his grandparents, Lena and David Taylor. His grandmother received a 10th grade education and his grandfather held no formal education. Most importantly, Jesse's grandparents made tremendous sacrifices and encouraged him to strive for excellence through education.

In 1970, Jesse enrolled at Lane College where he studied business and economics. While at Lane, he was awarded a prestigious Economic Internship with the US Department of State to study the economic impact of the drought in Senegal, West Africa. Tyson graduated from Lane in 1974, with honors, and entered The Ohio State University where he earned a Master's Degree in Business Administration in Marketing in 1976. Later in his career, Jesse attended the Brookings Institution, a renowned nonprofit public policy organization and the International Institute for Management Development Business School in Lausanne, Switzerland.

Philanthropic Efforts

In 2011, Jesse announced his retirement from a 35 year career at Exxon Mobil as the Global Aviation Director to begin a new chapter in his life, philanthropy. In addition to tallying many accolades of being a leader at Exxon Mobil, Jesse Tyson has received numerous awards for his philanthropic work and benevolence. Black Enterprise magazine named Tyson "one of the most influential people of the 20th century." Most recently, he received The Ohio State University Fisher College of Business Global Diversity Award and the Pacesetter Award and the 100 Black Men of America Lifetime Achievement Award for Community Service. He is a life member of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity Incorporated, where he participates in the development of leaders, promotes brotherhood and academic excellence, while providing service and advocacy for diverse, multicultural communities. As a child who grew up in the segregated South, Jesse experienced limited access to educational opportunities, scholarships and academic advancement. To this end, Jesse made a commitment to his grandparents that he would pursue his personal obligation to "give back" to ensure other black children had equal access to educational programs and growth incentives. For more than 45 years, Jesse worked with nonprofit and civic organizations to promote the welfare of others, by generous donations of money, time and resources. His noblest charitable pursuits are in the form of endowments at Lane College, the Ohio State University, and Spelman College that provide for everlasting tribute for three people who inspired him the most; his grandmother, Lena Taylor, mentor, Dr. Frank Hale, and his wife, Cheryl Tyson.
